

Sandrine Gaillot, Esq. is member of the New York Bar and soon to be member of the Quebec Bar. She has been representing clients before the United Nations International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR) since 2007, and has also practiced before the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, the International Criminal Court, and the Special Court for Sierra Leone.

Sandrine also has expertise advising governments and international organizations on compliance with human rights standards, treaty implementation, and legislative reform. She gained tremendous experience working in security-challenged regions of Africa, investigating illegal exploitation of natural resources and monitoring a pilot disarmament program in northeastern D.R.Congo.

Sandrine holds two LL.M., one in international human rights law, obtained magna cum laude from the University of Notre Dame Law School (2007) and one in Trial Advocacy in Federal Criminal Defense from the California Western School of Law (2013). She also holds a Masters in Public Affairs from the School of Public and Environmental Affairs at Indiana University (Bloomington) (2002).

Sandrine recently published in the Federal Criminal Defense Journal (2013), and is admitted to appear before Federal courts in New York State (Eastern and Southern Districts). She is currently involved with the American Bar Association-affiliated group Lawyers in Business and Human Rights.
